Following PM Narendra Modi's appeal urging citizens to reduce fuel consumption and adopt sustainable practices, Gujarat University has advised its staff to opt for carpooling, public transport and online work wherever feasible.

In a circular to all departments and university buildings, the administration said the advisory was in line with the PM's call for fuel conservation. The university said the move aims to curb unnecessary vehicle use and promote environmentally responsible practices among employees and officers.

"All university employees and officers are requested to, wherever possible, travel together with other employees/officers residing nearby or in surrounding areas so that the use of vehicles can be reduced and fuel can be conserved," the circular read.

The university also encouraged employees to use Metro services, electric buses and other public transport facilities wherever possible. Departments were advised to promote online work to the extent feasible.
